Gathering Industries Expanding Services; Renovating Kitchen Space at 458 Edgewood

HomeAid Atlanta brought Skanska and H.J. Russell & Company to help Gathering Industries complete kitchen renovations

ATLANTA, July 13, 2021 – Gathering Industries, a nonprofit organization that strives to end homelessness one culinary job at a time, is renovating the commercial grade kitchen space in the Community of Hospitality’s building located at 458 Edgewood Ave SE, Atlanta, GA. Formerly the home of 458 Café, the kitchen requires system and structural upgrades.

As the kitchen renovation nears completion, HomeAid Atlanta stepped in to host a day of service with volunteers from Skanska and H.J. Russell & Company. The day was filled with team bonding, productive work and delicious food provided by Gathering Industries.

“For more than 8 years, Gathering Industries has supported dozens of Georgians through intensive culinary skills training,” said Alex Reethof, co-Founder of Gathering Industries. “Today marks a new chapter in our mission delivery journey. We are honored to be part of such a historic community and space.”

Once complete, the new kitchen facility will be Gathering Industries new home and allow the organization to continue its mission of training individuals to work in the food industry to help them find a way out of homelessness. This is just one component of the two properties located at 458 and 460 Edgewood undergoing a complete renovation to update systems and reconfigure interior space. Owned for over three decades by nonprofit Community of Hospitality, these adjacent buildings have continuously served the community by providing office and program space for nonprofits working to make a difference in the lives of their neighbors in need. Once the renovation is complete there will be a new kitchen for Gathering Industries as well as a home for three additional nonprofit partners that will provide affordable housing, community organizing and gathering space to make an even larger impact on the Sweet Auburn neighborhood located just blocks away from the Martin Luther King, Jr. Center.

“It is a privilege to work with Gathering Industries and HomeAid Atlanta on this project that will directly serve people experiencing homelessness in Atlanta,” said Jimmy Mitchell, LEED BD+C of Skanska. “Together with H.J. Russell & Company, we refurbished and renewed Gathering Industries’ new commercial grade kitchen space.”
